Runner is saved from life in a wheelchair

By STEPHEN PELLINGER

ANY DAY that Nigel Arnold makes up his mind to go to the gym, he has to be ready to go to the gym. For the last 12 months, he has been in a wheelchair, but only because he was so ill that he could not get to the gym. For the last 12 months, he has been in a wheelchair, but only because he was so ill that he could not get to the gym. For the last 12 months, he has been in a wheelchair, but only because he was so ill that he could not get to the gym.

He said: "The pain got worse and worse and eventually I had to stop running and even had trouble walking. The last pain came when I went to watch Norwich City and I could not even get to the stadium."

After weeks of agony, Mr Arnold of Norwich, had a CT scan, which showed that he had a large aneurysm in his brain.

Mr Arnold said: "All week as the doctors got the results I got a greater and greater feeling of dread in the back of my mind."

Mr Arnold said: "I thought I would have been there for a long time, but I was told that I would have to be in a wheelchair for the rest of my life."

Mr Arnold said: "I was told that I would have to be in a wheelchair for the rest of my life. I was told that I would have to be in a wheelchair for the rest of my life. I was told that I would have to be in a wheelchair for the rest of my life."

Mr Arnold said: "I was told that I would have to be in a wheelchair for the rest of my life. I was told that I would have to be in a wheelchair for the rest of my life. I was told that I would have to be in a wheelchair for the rest of my life."

"I never imagined in a million years that I would be able to run again and am so grateful to Mr Latchman and his team for the treatment I received which was first class"
